4. Become a Leader For Social Change as a SOURCE Service Scholar! – Deadline Sun, Apr 17th
SOURCE is excited to announce the fifth year of the SOURCE Service Scholars (SSS) Program. SSS is a unique opportunity for students to make a long-term commitment to a Baltimore community-based organization (CBO) that is a SOURCE partner while receiving a $1,250 stipend. Scholars will receive training and guidance from SOURCE staff covering the following: service-learning theories and practices, project management, volunteer recruitment and management, and delivering and reporting on outcomes. Additionally, Scholars will engage in reflective practice throughout the program. These trainings will be delivered through the SOURCE Service Academy as well as one-on-one consultations with SOURCE staff. This opportunity is open to any student enrolled in the Schools of Public Health and Nursing during the 2016-2017 academic year who has an interest in long-term service and community-based professional development. SOURCE is now accepting applications for the 2016-2017 SOURCE Service Scholar cohort! Applications are due by Sun, Apr 17th at 11:59pm. SSS Projects have already been identified with SOURCE community partners. Applicants should review all projects online and rank up to 5 top choices of interest. Applications will be reviewed, and top candidates for each project will be invited to interview with the CBOs. Information and application materials can be found by clicking here.

7. Nominate Your SOURCE Champion of the Month
Each month, SOURCE highlights an individual student, faculty, or staff member from among the JHU Schools of Medicine, Nursing, and Public Health who exemplifies what it means to be a champion of service in Baltimore. To nominate your champion, submit a nomination via our online form at: SOURCE Champion of the Month.

8. SOURCE Champion of the Month – Braveen Ragunanthan
The Champion of the Month aims to tell one story of many from individuals who commit themselves to service. This month, SOURCE proudly features Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health student Braveen Ragunanthan! Braveen is a SOURCE Service Scholar and has been working with Elev8 Baltimore since April 2015 to identify health needs and existing health strengths in the Ele8 Baltimore schools. Learn how Braveen’s time in our shared community has played a role in his development as a health care professional by visiting Champion of the Month – Braveen Ragunanthan.

9. SOURCE Partner of the Month – Maryland New Directions
Each month, SOURCE acknowledges one of its partnering community-based organizations or student groups. This month SOURCE salutes Maryland New Directions (MND)! MND’s mission is to train and coach people facing career and life transitions to overcome barriers, restore self-belief, and acquire the skills and tools needed to secure employment. To learn more about Maryland New Directions and the great work they are doing in our shared community, visit Partner of the Month – Maryland New Directions.

10. SOURCE is on Social Media! Facebook, Instagram, Linkedin, SOURCE Blog, Twitter and YouTube

11. Can You Read, Speak, and Write in More Than One Language? Sign Up for SOURCE’s “Languages” Volunteer Program!
Over the years, SOURCE has received various requests from our partnering community-based organizations for assistance working with clients who speak little to no English. Within our diverse Hopkins family, we have international students, faculty, and staff; individuals who have traveled the world; as well as people who are fluent in many languages. In order to assist our community partners, we are looking for Hopkins students, faculty, and staff who would be interested in using their language skills to respond to community-identified needs. Types of assistance may include: translating documents, translating during non-medical appointments (such as school orientations), phone assistance, and much more. Volunteers could be asked to be available by phone, computer, or meeting at a public location. The program will not include any medical interpreting, and will not send volunteers to any private residencies. Over 30 requested languages! If you would be willing to be called upon for your language skills, please enter your information into our database by going to: SOURCE Language Database. While we cannot guarantee that a request will be made, you never know when your language skills may be able to assist someone in need!

12. Report Your Community Involvement Experience
Have you been involved in community activities here in Baltimore including volunteer work, service-based student group activities, community-based courses and practice in the community? If so, please take a few minutes to report your community involvement from this current academic year (only report activities since July 1st, 2014). We rely on students, faculty, and staff to report their information in order to describe Hopkins activities in the local community as well as to increase funding and support more organizations. Help us help our community by logging your service. Sign in with your JHED ID and password here: Service Reporting Form.

13. Online Shopping? Shop Online to Support SOURCE and Baltimore

COMMUNITY-IDENTIFIED SCHOLARLY PROJECT NEEDS (Internships, Practicum, Capstones, Scholarly Concentrations, Special Studies, and Other Academically-Based Project Possibilities)

21. Are you interested in learning about Food Sustainability? Do you want to get involved in Baltimore City this spring? Register for the Food Systems Sustainability Course! JHSPH Students Only

Learn about Food System Sustainability and how community-based organizations in the Baltimore area are focusing on it this spring by registering for the Food Systems Sustainability Course! Description: Converging crises in resource depletion and contamination, climate change, and population – and extensive food waste, inefficiency and overuse – combine to create unprecedented threats to longterm food security and thus to the public’s health. There is need for effective, system-oriented responses, with concern for impacts on inequities. Addressing these environmental crises often yields nutritional and other public health co-benefits. This practicum course provides students the opportunity to learn about selected food system sustainability issues, assist organizations working for positive change, and learn from the experience. This is a 3-credit course including 2 hours/week in-class and 4 hours/week out of class for practica. In class, one of the two hours is devoted to discussion of student experiences at their sites. The second hour will introduce selected topics in food system environmental sustainability, including guest speakers who will be invited to give interactive talks on their various topics related to food system sustainability. Students will be assigned relevant readings, and will also be asked to maintain journals about their practicum experiences. Interested students should register for the course before the start of 4th term. Questions? Email Meg Burke (mbburke@jhu.edu).

28. 5th Annual Symposium on the Social Determinants of Health: Race, Racism and Baltimore’s Future: Mon, Apr 25th 8am-6pm
In September 2015, a group of Baltimore’s business, religious and philanthropic leaders placed a series of full-page ads in local newspapers, asserting “THE TIME IS NOW” for “real, inclusive and transformative change.” The ad campaign was intended to spur conversation about structural racism. On April 25, The Johns Hopkins Urban Health Institute and the JHU Office of the Provost will host a day-long event to have that conversation. The symposium will consider how racism in our criminal justice, healthcare and education systems affect people of color in Baltimore every day, with an impact that spans generations. Race, Racism and Baltimore’s Future: A Focus on Structural and Institutional Racism will bring together experts from Johns Hopkins, Baltimore and cities all over the country. Along with local community leaders, they will explore new approaches to understanding these forms of racism and ways to address them through collaborative efforts. Online registration before the event is $15; same day registration at the event is $20. The event will be held at the Turner Auditorium on the JHU School of Medicine Campus, 720 Rutland Ave, Baltimore, MD 21205 on Mon, Apr 25th from 8am-6pm. For more information and to register visit UHI Annual Symposium on the Social Determinants of Health.
