MEDICAL APARTHEID & EQUITY IN CARE

This event is designed to provide students with a better understanding of the interpersonal and structural barriers to health equity through the medium of health education. Through a panel discussion and critical reflection session participants will gain an understanding of the way racism is an influential ideology of health professional practice and education tools. Moreover, participants will practice steps of analysis, and action to address oppression in health practice and in their personal lives.

Panelists

Emerald Jenkins
JHU School of Nursing

Graham Mooney
JHU School of Medicine

Ruth-Alma Turkson-Ocran
JHU School of Medicine

Wed, October 28
5:00 - 7:00 pm EDT

For more details & registration visit SOURCE.jhu.edu

Raffle prize entries for registered attendees - RSVP and join us for a chance to win!

Questions? Contact NPHN@exchange.johnshopkins.edu

Sponsored by Nursing Public Health Network & SOURCE